We spent UAH 269,583 (≈$6,543) on a quarantine module and medicines for the shelter's cats and dogs. The remaining UAH 283 (≈$6.87) will be used to help other animals in need.

Save a Life shelter in Khmelnytskyi did not have a separate room for newly arrived animals — they were immediately placed with other residents. Recently, five evacuated cats infected the long-time residents of the shelter with an infectious disease. To avoid such situations in the future, we purchased a quarantine module for the shelter for UAH 260,000 (≈$6,310).

This is what it looks like from the outside

From the inside

The quarantine module is equipped with electric power, air conditioning, and cage compartments for animal isolation. Here are the ones who have already settled in it:

We spent the rest of the money we raised on medicines and care products. We paid UAH 9,583 (≈$232) for syringes, pads, antibiotics, metabolic stimulants, as well as antifungal and anti-inflammatory drugs for cats and dogs.

Thank you for making sure that no animal is left without care.

And I'm making sure that this is the last injection!
